

Comparison between Horses and Mules

This comparison was written by a mule owner and my comments are in red:

Horses	Mules
some can be dominated by humans - no human should try to dominate rather we should lead by example	can be dominated by none
some succumb to aggression - there is no need to be aggressive although we may have to be assertive at times	succumbs to affection
Some are indifferent to humans - most are inquisitive	is inquisitive to humans
Most move then think - we want them to respond rather then react	thinks then moves
Looks at you - we want them to focus on us	looks into you
Some are trained by short punishment and short rewards - there is no place for punishment; we need to be patient, praise and use great logic	trained by long patience and great logic
To ride a horse well, one must be proud - we should be humble and privileged	To ride a mule well, one must be humble
